Mr. Fedor: I am a life-long old Whig, have fraterized with the conservatives during the war, and have felt inclined to join the Democracy, but they have recently manifested such an exclusive split in calling out candidates, in beloing county conventions, in appointing district, county, and precinct committees, that I have felt like "a poor boy at a frolic," or as "one who was sent for and conduit come;"

THE 30TH OF MAY CONVENTION -The Mays ville Bugle, Thomas M. So, journer, knowing that the talk was meant for her, looked him in the face and said: "Sir, you ain't acquainted with God Aimighty! That's what's the matter with you." She was in the store of another copperhead, whom she did not personally know, soliding funds to take her to Detroit to carry sanitary supplies to colored soldiers there, and having asked others pres-ent, at length applied to him. A PREDICAMENT.—The Quincy (III) Herald says that a few evenings since a young lady was quietly promenading Main street, in that city, dressed in the process for the shound of the particulars of which were published in yesterday's insue, appears to have been some of the particulars of which were published in yesterday's insue, appears to have been some of the particulars of which were published in yesterday's insue, appears to have been some of the particulars of which were published in yesterday's insue, appears to have been

As I bear your a editor, I return yer tissh—I never rots any, only goutlemen.

The Court also are allowed as the country in the process of the country in the co imperial tervants, and upon the decorations of the imperial tervants, and upon the decorations of the imperial palaces, which are all of the most growgeous description—a perfect biase of gold and precions stones. The aplendor of the court and the lavash scale of expenditure keep on increasing, while the financial resources of the empire are constantly diministrating. Since 1865 the public debt has risen from 400,000,000 to 1,200 000 retubes.

Of course this is pathy owing to the crimean war; but with a project syst in of economy we should have long ago recovered from the effects of that war as we slid from that of 1872, by which the most flourishing provinces in limits were certainted, whereas that of 1832 was only extred on on the ouskirts of the empire, and let the interior introduced. As it is, we are only fresh losers every year, and every year on most operious terms, notwithslanding which the most uccessary public workslanguish for the want of funds, and the great Southern Radiroad, which was in everybody smouth after the pasce, and which to secure us against a repetition of the evests at Schastopol, is still a dream of the finance. No wonder independent mee like Count Strogan of raise their voices against and the great states and their workslanguish of the Count strong and if raise their voices against and the great states and the Count strong and if raise their voices against and their count of the watch of the count of the interior nations and the first works against a count of the count of th white-haired speciator to watch a lot of little fellows shooting away without being treated to a mental picture of the od chool house, of laymates of years long past, and of the dieture of you h. Yes, indeed, it is hard; for everybedy has played at marbles at some period of his life, and the game of the years ago. We think we have detected a few slight charges, however. For instance, the ample round ring of the olden time, with its stole of "chains" has given place to crescent-saaped, triangular, oclasgosal, and all sorts of irea. But, after at, the game is essentially uncharged. The players have to commence chooting from the "taw" line, as of old; and no lawer can continue the game after boing "killed." Wee noto the chap who dieregyout the "tan histings" rule; and, lacking in honor must be the boy who would creep when "rat pan obtained as minimes, and tragger in an advantage over the others. The embryogambier find a pleasurable excitement in the fact that he may presibly commence operations with a little "brown," and come ou with a well he do bag of "agaites"—an excitement that he can find in no other game.

DIFGRACEFUL PROCEEDINGS-A LEWIS SINNER connection with the wife of a colored citizen, returned to this city vesterday. He was in New York about ten days ago, and stated that he was on his way to California.

Considerable feeling has exited against this man Murray, on account of his numerous transpressions and his return pesterday was rendered additionally offinitive to those who knew him well, by the report that his money having runshort, he had retued to sell the projectly now in the possession of his family, and thus seen, e. he means of marrying out his plane.

Whether these reports were well founded or to, it is certain that public inclination manifested itself in giving to the unhappy sinner a close-fitting coat of far and feathers. About eleven o'clock last right a large crowd assembled around Murray's house. The family were aroused, and the victim quelty brought into the street. His clothes were then viciently stupped from his nerson, the far administrate.

A canine happened to come in too chest proximity to the lady, and, in making a spring to pass her after some object that attracted his attention, he became entangled in the wiry circles of those "other things," and then there came a storm of excitement. The canine struggled, the lady pulled, but the wires would not give way, and, after a desperate conflict, a gentleman came to the assistance of the lady, and released the strangled dog. The lady, blueling, pursued her way, no doubt thinking feetcoms were not so pleasant after all.

When O Nell's company placed at Dundalk, an influential patroness commanded Pizarro, and the minager was compelled to engage a Rolls from Dublia for the occasion. He did not think it necessary to make the "state" aware that the state both of treasury and wardrobe forbade the employment of the usual force of supercumularies; so, when the representative of Ataliha's army appeared on the scene, Rolla was paralyzed with astonishment, and stopped short in his invocation. Canchy recovering binned, however, he exclaimed: "Mad" all skinhal thee? Come, then, my brave associate, "see — a piece of gag pardonable under the commetance.

The mast experienced actor is apt to find his tengue untury at times, and playing strange thicks with the text. The following curious coloque took place between Quin as Balance and Peg Wellington as Syvia in the "Recruiting Officer": "Sylvia, how old were you when your mether was married?" "What, siz?" Pehaw I mean how old were you when your coeffer was born?" "I regret, sir, I cannot an ever your questions; but I can tell you how old I was when my mother died!" Quin, who cospiled and detested theatrical dateers, had thrust ngon him the disagreeaole task of excusing the non-appearance of the popular datisets, and except d it by saying: "I am destred by the manager to inform you that the date eintended for to-night is obliged to be emitted the account of Madame Itolia having castecated her ankle. COURT-MARTIALING CIVILIANS IN TIME OF Peace.-len't it about time for this strocity, this concomitant of war, this essence of tyranmy, to cease? These provisions are too plain to be misun erstood, and they are portions of the supreme law of the land, which no President or Con-gress or court may dieregard with impunity. It is not a "time of war or public danger" now we reiterate, and the people expect the Presi dent, who has 'unrolled the Constitution," to see that it is obeyed. TRUE THEORY OF THE CONSTITUTION -The editor of the Louisville Conrier, yesterday, repudiated his repudiation of the secession reso stions of 1798, and re-offirmed them, as cona'ning the fundamental doctrines of the "Democratic" party. Overlooking his incontencies of the last few days, we are willing o credit him with sincerity in his present posi tion, though we should like to exact from him ephstantial pledge that he will stick to it nenceforth, that we may always be able to iocate him. The editor of the Coutier evidently thinks that the resolutions [of '98 must be cound doctrine because Thomas Jefferson wrote them, and the Democratic party has constantly avowed them for more than twenty years past. We acknowledge no such test of political orthodoxy. Thomas Jefferson, when he wrote those resolutions, whether he conemplated their consequences or not, put forth octrines not only dangerone but fundamentally wrong; and the Democratic party, for more than fifty years, in making those resolution a part of its platform, did no less than sow the eds of the late secession rebellion. Thomas It fferson performed great and valuable services to the country, and for them we honor his nemory; but we never did and cannot now ac cept his resolutions of '98. The Democratic party, even before the late war, possessed certain good traits and advocated certain sound principles, but we never did and cannot now ludorse its advocacy of the Virginia and Kentucky resolutions, simply because they not admit legitimately of any othe an a recession c w'ruction. They are at once the essence and embodiment of the whole doctrine of nullification and secession, and any potical party that shall undertake, in this period our national history, to engraft the ions upon its piatform of principls should whelmed beneath the indignation of the Amar.an people. What are the resolutions of 1798? With at reproducing the whole of them we will ex ract that portion which will enable the reader messure their entire length and breaith and by which it may be clearly seen how ut of our constitutional political system.

The language quoted above distinctly recogises the paramount sovereignty of the State and its right to determine, in its own way, the of Congress, and, also, the right of a State to judge for itself as well of the infractions as the mode and measure of redress" on account of an This doctrine clearly admits the "right of seces sion," upon which the late repellion was predi cated. We hold that the National Government. established by the Constitution, is supreme, Supreme Court of the United States is the "final judge of the extent of the powers delegated" to ower upon the President, or by the Congress, and that any law enacted by that body must be obeyed by all the people of the United n issued in pursuance thereof, that the sus- 8 ates until it shall be decided to be unconsti tutional by that highest tribunal of justice. but a gorenment which is enpreme within the been officially declared, and when the last em-bers of war are extinguished. Possibly some right or the power in Itself to judge of its stitutional provision forbidding the suspension by Daniel Webster on the 27th of January, except in cases of war or invasion does 1830, in his celebrated debate with Mr. Hayne, sarily imply that the suspension, once of South Carolina, on the well-known resolu declared, shall not continue after war or inva- tions of Mr. Foote, and we submit the remarks gion has ceased. But this would be a very poor of the great Exponnder of the Constitution as and paltry quibble. No true statesman would a complete refutation of the resolutions of bestow a thought npon it. The clear object of 168, and as a clear presentation of the true

"A few words, Mr. President, on this constltutional argument, which the honorable gentleobstructed operation throughout the man has labored to reconstruct. His argument consists of two propositions and an inference

"1. That the Constitution is a c mpact be "2 That a compact between two, with an crity reserved to one to interpret its terms, would be a surrender to that one of all power "3. Therefore (such is his inference) the General Government does not possess the authority

"Now, sir, who does not see, without the sid of exposition or detection, the utter confusion be just, and in such a cause he is as bold as a | of ideae involved in this so elaborate and systematic argument?

"The Constitution, it is said, is a compact eliceen States; the States, then, and the States the General Government and the State Governthe General Government itself a party? Upon the honorable gentleman's hypothesis, the Genare civil courts for if not for the trial of offend. eral Government is the result of the compact, that the States will only interiere, by the ties to it. Yet the argument, as the gentleman net destroy it, they will not impair it; they will ence? If one that compact to which it owes its own existence etory. All regulated governments, all free govof a compact, the gentleman considers | terested and well-disposed in liberty, or property, without due process of made in this compact to settle points of disputed construction or contested power that shall come into controversy? And this trees tion would still be answered, and conclusively answered, by the Constitution itself.

While the centleman is contending against netrnetlon he himself is setting up the most use and dargerous construction. The Confintion declares that the laws of Co gress passed in pursuance of the Constitution Il be the supreme law of the land No construction is necessary here. It declares, also, with equal plainness and precision, that ir judicial power of the United States shall exten l resy case arising under the laws of Congress. Tels needs no construction. Here is a law. then, which is declared to be supreme, and here a newer established hich is to enterpret that Now, sir, how has the gentleman met bis? Suppose the Constitution to be a com-eact, yet here are its terms, and how does the gentleman get rid of them? He cannot argue the seal off the bond nor the word out of the in t: umcut. Here they are; what answer does he give to them? None in the world, eir, except in a condition of inferiority; and that it results from the very nature of things, there being no uperlor, that the parties must be their own judges! Thus closely and engently does the enorable gentleman reason on the words of the Constitution. The gentleman says, if there le such a power of final decision in the General overrment, he asks for the grant of that pow-Well, eir, I show him the grant; I turn bim to the very words. I show him that she lows of Congress are supreme, and that the jud cial poncer extends, by express words, to the inter l: must result from the nature of thines that the States, being parties, must judge for themselves I have admitted, that, if the Constitution cre to be considered as the creature of the State Governments, it might be modified, in pleasure. But, even in that case, it would be necessary that they should agree. One alon could not interpret it conclusively; one alone could not construe it; one aione could not modify it. Yet the gentleman's doctrine is that South Carolina a'one may construe and is ves equal rights to al.

this, he retreats into the general reflection that

So then, sir, even supposi q the Constitution to be a compact be ween the States, the gentle nan's dectrine, percetheless, is not maintaina is; because, first, the General Government is ot a party to that compact, but a Governmen powers of troing and deciding doub, ful ones ions; and secondly, because, if the Constitution e regarded as a compact, not one State only out all the States are parties to that compact, and one can have no right to fix nion it he own peculiar construction.

"So much. sir, for the argument, even it the remises of the gentlemen were granted, or n'd be proved. But, sir, the gentlemen has alled to maintain his leading proposition. He has not shown, it cannot be shown that the Constitution is a compact between State govroments. The Constitution itself, in its very ont, refutes that ides; it declares that it is or sained and established by the people of the Unite States. By far from saying that it is established w the governments of the several States, in ces not even say that it is established by the exple of the several States; but it propounces that it is established by the people of the United States, in the aggregate. The gentleman says t must mean no more than the people of the everal States. Dunbtless, the people of the several States, taken collectively, constitute the pecule of the United States; but it is In this. beir collective capacity, it is as all the people of the United States, that they establish the Constitution. So they declare; and words cannot be plainer than the words used.

"When the gentleman says the Constitution reach—none whatever. If a bad man be elect-ed governor—which is certainly possible—he a compact between the States, he uses langrage exactly applicable to the old Confeders. tion. He speaks as if he were in Congress be fore 1709. He describes fully that old state of things then existing. The Confederation was. his villainies may be reached before his term re partis to it. We had no other general government. But that was found insufficient, and inadequate to the public exigencies. The people were not satisfied with it, and undertook to establish a better. They nadertook to form and, therefore, the "sovereignty" of a State | a General Government, which should stand on a compact between States, but a Constitution; popular government, founded in popular election, directly responsible to the people them seives, and divided into branches with preeribed limits of power, and prescribed dutie They ordained such a government, they gave it the name of a Constitution, and therein establisted a distribution of power between this their General Gevernment, and their several State governments. When they shall become diseatistied with this distribution, they can alter . Their own power over their own instrument mains. But until they shall after it, it must stand as their will, and is equally binding on c none. He likens it to the case of a treaty which, there being no common enperior theory of the Constitution. Mr. Webster, in each party must interpret for himself, under its own obligation of good faith. But this is not a maty, but a constitution of government, with powers to execute itself, and fulful its duties. "I admit, sir, that this government is a gov errment of checks and balances; that is, the use of Representatives is a check upon the Senate, and the Senate is a check on the House and the President a check on both. But I cannot comprehend, or, if I do. I totally differ him, when he applies the notion of checks and balances to the interference of different overnments. He argues that if we transgress our constitutional limits, cach State, as a State. has a right to cheek us. Does he admit the converse of the proposition, that we have a right to check the States? The gentleman's dectrines would give us a strange jumble of authorities and powers, instead of governments of separate and defined powers. It is the part the General Government and on the States.

"The gentleman, sir, finds analogy where only, are parties to the compact. How comes ment each in its proper sphere, avoiding as carefully as possible every kind of interference. "Finally, eir, the honorable gentleman sava, the creature of the compact, not one of the par- power, to preserve the Constitution. They will has now stated it, makes the Government itself only save, they will only preserve, they will one of its own creators! It makes it a party to | only strengthen it' Ab! elr, this is but the old For the purpose of erecting the Constitution on crnments, have been broken by similar disinnce. But I take leave of the

Mr. Dreggs next addressed the House in stp-port of the hill. He regarded the matter as a sational work of importance, and one which members from all sections of the country should sustain.

members from all sections of the country should sustain.

Mr. Grimnell followed on the same side. The imponence grant of land, he said, owned by the complany was not worth more than so much mooushine or clear sky, not worth a penny an acre, without access to it by railway. No man would own and pay tares on it without access to it. Although the Central Pacific Railroad passed his door, he was willing to have the Northern read also constructed, and as many other railroads to the Pacific as could he built. Mr. Wright addressed the floars in opposition to the measure, which he denominates a sert of gift enterprise, where much was promised and very little performed. He thought it was extremely dangerous for the liverenment k-ned the attempt to the occasion when the vill trought the Seviour to the top of an ex-sedingly high mounts in and showed him mu-repetity, and offered him a very large tract of cpeity, and offered him a very large tract of the land, but our Saviour knew that the wild did not own it, and said to him 'Get thee blud me, Satan." He did not expect much necessitionness, however, from the rairroad mpany which would take all the land offered, hough Congress had no right to give it away. I thought the soidlers were far better entitled the bounty of Congress than the railroad mpanies, and he intilmated that he had some manies, and he intilmated that he had some as of inviting the Camden and Amhov Raillad to come and get its share of public lands.
